Formed in 2008 by a small group of Ann Arbor community members (including the Electric Bolt race directors) motivated by the ALS diagnosis of a local parent and beloved youth coach, A2A3 is a grassroots, nonprofit organization whose mission is to raise funds for research leading toward effective treatments and ultimately a cure for ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease) while raising awareness of the disease, encouraging physical and fun activities, and building a compassionate community. A2A3 is a 100% volunteer organization.
